contains carbon dioxide and carbon monoxide gases. These are very dangerous for human health. Besides this, the burning of petrol in various vehicles emits poisonous substances. Poisonous wastes from industrial units fall in canals, drains or rivers. This makes the land infertile. Crops refuse to grow up. Noise pollution due to pressure horns and audiotapes being played in music shops are a real and potent danger. Aged people can't sleep peacefully due to this.

The youth can help a great deal in checking this pollution. To decrease air pollution, we should avoid using private vehicles. We should use public transport for going to school or to meet our friends. The use of air-conditioners should be avoided as far as possible. Then we can plant trees. We should say no to polythene bags. We should not waste water and not make unnecessary noise and also prof. has given numerous statistics about environmental pollution and measures taken by the developing and developed countries of the world.
