Report: Career Guidance

A talk on the future world of work

On March 7, 2020

Objective: To equip the students with knowledge of employment outlook across job families, changes in skills demand and composition and essential skills required for employability.

Elaboration/ Context :

In the past world changed little. The localised communities of the past thrived on the monotonous routine work they did. Everybody mastered a profession and solely depended on it. But the recent phenomenon of globalisation and liberalisation has ushered in a new era of dramatic changes. People and communities' across the world have been rocked out of their slumber, displaced and made to face new realities and challenges. The communities and people are expected to adapt in order to survive. Age of specialisation is long gone. Multidiscipline and multitasking is the new normal. Moreover, the unpredictability and volatility of the world we live in makes the preparedness even more important. Keeping in mind these aspects department of English in association with Career Guidance cell of the college organised a talk on Career Guidance.

Details:

Mr. Haricharan, delivered a talk on March 7, 2020. He being an accomplished trainer and having given programs to facilitate learning outcomes for team development, fostering and managing trust, increasing team productivity, goal setting, stress management and time management was the right choice to deliver the talk. With 13 years of experience in the area of sales and marketing, training and development and having worked in many sectors including retail, IT, Telecom infrastructure industries our institution could not have asked for a better resource person. His vast experience of having trained more than 35000 people with companies like Nokia, Samsung, LG Electronics, Dubai Duty Free, Toshiba, Daimler came in handy in the engrossing interactive talk with our students.

Outcome

More than 100 students from humanities, commerce and science streams attended the talk. Students interacted about changes in skills demand and composition and essential skills required for employability. Groups were formed and many interesting tasks were assigned to these groups to give them simulated experience of what is expected in job market. Talk also focused on interview skills, resume/ CV writing and new skills widely sought after by the employers. The talk instilled tremendous confidence in the students and equipped them with the much needed knowledge to be prepared for the competitive world.

The talk was presided by the Principal Dr. Venkatesh and HoD of English department Dr. Anuradha
